If users would take a little time to research the latest viruses, Trojans, spyware, and other dangerous threats often, they would take virus prevention measures to ensure their computers stay safe. Unfortunately, most users do not have the time to research new virus threats, so their PCs are always at risk.

Looking for antivirus software reviews can help you choose the best antivirus software, but if you are not familiar with the latest threats, how will you know which tools will protect you. According to the latest news online there appears to be several types of viruses that put computers at risk including the Virtumonde, which is an adware program that slowly destroys your OS and hard drive by forcing hundreds of pop-ups on your window screen. Ransom-AB is the latest Trojan and Visal. A is the latest worm that is presenting threats online. Vulnerable programs include MS10-064, MS10-063 and to 061.

Microsoft often posts some of the latest virus, Trojans, and spyware programs at their web site. It is worth taking a few minutes to explore the latest threats to take virus prevention by looking at antivirus reviews to find the best antivirus software. E-mail viruses are sent daily.

When the Doom Worm first appeared, a user downloaded the program from an unsuspecting E-mail. This Email supposedly came from Microsoft, but it was a dubbed E-mail by a dangerous hacker out of England who sent the E-mail using Microsoft's trusted name. Of course, the user did not suspect any threats, and after downloading the file, bam! The computer became infected and destroyed. The user had to purchase a new PC.

Take virus prevention to avoid this same problem. This person from England was eighteen-years old and only spent 5-years in prison for destroying hundreds of computers worldwide. Sure Doom Worm alerts went out but at this time software programs hadn't advance enough to offer complete protection for PCs.

Today's software's have incorporated advance technology solutions to ensure that Doom Worms and other dangerous viruses are stopped in their tracks. Looking for antivirus reviews online will help you decide on which program fits your needs.

Reviews often offer comprehensive details about various types of spyware or antivirus programs that offer you protection. Users will often approach pros and cons, which you should stay aware to so that you know which programs offer thorough protection.

According to the top best antivirus software reviews, VIPRE, BitFender, Kaspersky, Panda, Norton, McAfee, CA, and Trend Micro antivirus plus antispyware 2010 Editions is some of the best antivirus programs available. Keep in mind, some people have preferences and have found that McAfee programs are not as secure as they claim.

Some users may find that Kaspersky programs are useful. Therefore, look at the product reviews including the pros and cons to determine which software is right for you. It only takes a few minutes to save money. If you purchase a program randomly and find that it is not for you, it is money spent and wasted. So check out those antivirus reviews on the Web.

telefon dinleme